Introduction

This syllabus presents the general objectives for an academic year of World History with HistoryAtOurHouse. Its purpose is to give parents an overview of what will be covered during the year. This may, among other outcomes, facilitate the scheduling of other academic work, family trips, and the purchase or borrowing of books and other resources (both non-fiction and historical fiction) to match with your children's studies in the program.

Various aspects of the HistoryAtOurHouse program remain, and will likely always remain, a work in progress. Since I continually teach a range of clientele spanning age six to sixty, I am always learning new things about history, and new ways to teach it. To meet my clients' and my own needs, I find it essential as a historian to broaden and intensify my understanding of history on a continual basis. I am regularly reassessing the nature and precision of the information I present, as well as the role and significance of historical knowledge in a broader education. Consequently, I am always making pedagogical adjustments to the various programs I offer, and occasionally they are major ones.

The coming year's World History program is no exception. It follows a new design, as part of a new three-year program rotation, which in simple terms is: American history (Year 1), World history (Year 2), and European history—including ancient Greece and Rome (Year 3).

The exact title of the World History program for the coming year is: “Asia, Africa, and the World We Live In.” It will cover five primary units: China, Japan, India, the Islamic Middle East, and Sub-Saharan Africa.

As is the case in all “Big Picture History,” “Total History,” and History At Our House classes, the units will focus on how the past explains the present, using the method of anchor facts. In History At Our House, this method is systematized and explicit, helping students to see the importance of history and retain what they learn as useful knowledge.

There will also be optional writing seminars, optional readings (especially at higher levels), History Through Art classes offered through Outschool.com. Of special interest to families will be the series of optional “Special Topics” seminars to accompany the core curriculum, which are detailed at the end of this syllabus.

I am very excited about the year to come, and I look forward to working with you to make this academic year a terrific success.

Best regards,
Mr. Powell
