

F. The First Anchor Fact: The Russia-Ukraine War (2022-)

1. The most important event that shows us how the United States acts as the world police power today is the Russia-Ukraine War, which began in 2022.
2. This event is an “anchor fact,” which means it is a historical fact that helps us to understand the world today.
3. We have already seen that Ukraine is a country stuck between the European Union and the Russo-sphere, but that is only part of the picture. What is even more important about Ukraine is that it is stuck in between an America-centric military alliance called NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) and Russia.
4. For the past thirty years, the United States has been expanding its military alliance, which previously only included western Europe, to include almost all the countries of Eastern Europe as well.
5. Russia has feels that this is a threat, and it warned the United States that trying to add Ukraine to NATO is unacceptable to Russia. It would make it too easy for NATO to attack Russia in some future war.
6. When America didn’t listen, Russia invaded and conquered about 1/5 of Ukraine, which it now insists are part of Russia, and the United States sent billions of dollars and advanced weapons to Ukraine to support its war effort.
7. If there had not been a war, it’s quite possible that Europe and Russia would have learned to live in peace, and that a Euro-Russian Union would have formed at some point in the future. Instead, Europe has been forced to accept America as its protector, and Russia has been turned into an enemy once again.

Ukraine is geographically between Europe and Russia, but that means that it is politically stuck between an America-centric military alliance, NATO, in blue, and the Russo-sphere in pink. When America said that it wanted Ukraine to join NATO, Russia began preparing for the Russia-Ukraine War.

G. Back to the Beginning: The Declaration of Independence (1776)

1. The United States was created as a new country by the Declaration of Independence on the 4th of July, 1776.
2. The Declaration of Independence is part of a period of American history known as the American Revolution, in which Americans decided they could no longer tolerate being under the control of their mother country, Great Britain.
3. They rebelled against the raising of taxes (starting with the Stamp Act of 1765, which forced them to pay for stamps) because they were not consulted about such taxes. They were expected to do whatever the British government said, even though that was against English tradition going back over five hundred years.

4. The Declaration, written mainly by Thomas Jefferson, stated that governments are supposed to protect individuals' rights to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

H. Independence and Neutrality

1. As soon as America became independent, a critical test arose for the country's leaders.
2. A revolution broke out in France, partly due to the inspiration provided by America.
3. Many Americans wanted to help, especially because France had helped America succeed in the American Revolution by also fighting the British.
4. George Washington said America should be neutral, and have "as little political connection as possible" with Europe in order to stay independent.
5. Then Napoleon became emperor over France because the French Revolution failed. Thomas Jefferson, who became the third president, warned him that he should abandon France's territorial claims in North America, because it would make the two nations enemies. The result was the Louisiana Purchase of 1803, when the US doubled in size.
6. The main goal of America's early presidents was to conduct their affairs with the rest of the world so that America would stay independent.

I. Political Separation: The Monroe Doctrine of 1823

1. The world we live in has a United States in it because it was created in 1776 when the country declared its independence and detached itself from the rest of world. The world is also the way it is, because America later became entangled in many wars, such as the Russia-Ukraine War. What happened in between?
2. In order to make sense of where we are today, we need to understand how America changed from what it was originally into what it is.
3. The key lies in the ideas accepted by Americans at different points in history.
4. The original set of ideas that America lived by are announced in the Declaration of Independence, but another important set of ideas is called the "Monroe Doctrine," which was announced by James Monroe, the president in 1823.
5. Monroe identified that America's "political system" and Europe's are different and incompatible, so America should not only be independent, but also politically separate from the rest of the world.
6. The first parts of this doctrine (which means: a set of ideas) is a warning to European empires to stay out of the Americas. This warning was issued because the Ibersphere had been formed as a distinct cultural block when the colonies of Spain and Portugal also became independent.
7. The second part—which is especially significant today—is a promise that America would stay out of the wars of others.
8. The Monroe Doctrine was followed consistently and successfully for nearly a century. How then did America become what it is today?
